"Dead" 40 Years Visiting Calgary

"Forty years ago I was reported dead in the obituary columns of the Herald," stated D. G. Hackney of Maple Creek.

Mr. Hackney left Calgary in the fall of 1898 for the Yukon. For several months no word was heard of him. Then in the late summer of 1899 his death was announced in the paper.

Today he is very much alive and plans to sing on the radio. He has written a song entitled "Life on the Range" and hopes to be able to be on the air during Stampede Week.

A very enjoyable time was spent Sunday evening, when a number of young folks from town journeyed to the Gingles Bros farm for a weiner roast. The first part of the evening was spent in playing ball, after which everyone ate a hearty supper of "hot-dogs", roasted marshmallows and coffee.

After supper, Miss Olga Zawasky sang several songs to the accompaniment of her guitar. Her splendid playing and singing was very much enjoyed by the group.

About midnight the young folks returned to town, all reporting a most enjoyable time.

Mr. R. Thompson is a Calgary visitor this week.

Mr. R. Hittle and two daughters are Calgary visitors this week; visiting with the former's sister, Miss Herrington, and also taking in the Stampede.

A number from Chinook attended the Sports Dance at Oyen Wednesday night.

New Type Clover

Among numerous other experimental fields and crops inspected at the annual forage crop field day at Lacombe Experimental Station yesterday was a new type of clover which is being tested for climatic suitability. A four or five year rotation was advocated using a mixture of grasses when seeding down.

Chinook District Has Best Stand of Wheat For Number of Years

Wheat is two feet tall at Chinook and heads are appearing rapidly. The stand is better than has been seen in the area since the bumper crops of 1915 and 1927. Hot sunshine and showers every two or three days have made growing conditions ideal.

As the result of continued showers the growth of slough hay has been slow and upland crops are much better this year. There has been no damage from either pests or hail so far but farmers are insuring against the latter as they feel the crop is worth it.

Country versus City

Apart from the economic aspect of the question, one is often tempted to wonder why there should be any influx of rural residents to metropolitan centres in Canada as well as in the United States. When one balances the advantages of life in the country, which means in the small town or village as well as on the farm, with that of life in the greater population centres, one feels a strong urge to plump for country life.

In normal times, of course, there is always an infiltration of restless and ambitious youth from country to city and there is also a fairly constant migration of the elderly who imagine they prefer to spend their declining years in surroundings which, however, many find later, are not so congenial as they fondly anticipated.

In difficult times, such as those experienced with great acuteness in Western Canada in the past decade, this tendency to migrate from the country to the city is accentuated by whole families who have found living conditions in the country impossible and who seek refuge in the larger centres in the expectation that they can better themselves.

Setting aside the problem of those who make the change in habitat because of pressure of economic circumstances, there are left the considerable number who voluntarily move from the farm or the small town to the centres of dense population in the expectation that in the cities they will enjoy amenities, pleasures and social contacts which, they believe, are unobtainable in rural surroundings. It is possible, however, that reflection will demonstrate that life in the country can be as amenable, or more, so, than in the cities.

What's A Hick Town?

The argument was well presented in an American publication recently by Les W. McHenry when he wrote:

"Where do they get that word 'Hick' anyway?"
"Last week organizers working to persuade the people of a neighborhood to vote for daylight saving started their public with the slogan, 'Vote for Daylight Saving and Keep our Town out of the Hick Town Class.'"

"Obviously it was the intention of the slogan makers to convey the impression that a 'hick town' is something to be looked down upon, the kind of a town we would not want to live in."

"From long usage the term 'hick town' when used by city dwellers, has come to mean a rural, farming community."

"Now just what is there so out of order, so uncouth, so undesirable about a rural farming community?"
"Well, let us see. In the first place the 'hick town' is a community where the air is fresh and pure, free from the smoke and gas and filth of city streets; in the 'hick town' you know your neighbors and neighbor with them—usually you don't have to look your doors at night; the churches and school are still the outstanding institutions of these communities; there is grass anywhere for the children to play on; they don't have to travel to a park or play on the pavement; there are birds and flowers, the natural ones, not the park variety, to be seen and enjoyed; there is peace and quiet and confidence. More and more those dwellers who can afford it are moving out to 'hick towns' to live and raise their families."

"Politics in the 'hick towns' are not complicated by the partnership of this or that political group with the underworld of vice, gambling, booze. The 'hick town' doesn't have to go through the periodical wave of moral reform when a 'clean up' is made just before the election in order to catch the church vote—and then allowed to die a natural death as soon as the shouting is over and the elected city administration again needs personal spending money and a place to meet privately and plot and plan and indulge in the very pastimes they so roundly denounced a short time before."

From The Hick Towns

"Business leaders will tell you that their smartest and most reliable men and women workers were boys and girls from the 'hick towns'. You don't hear the 'hick towns' wailing about their impending bankruptcy unless the state or national government helps solve their financial problems. There is—but what's the use. We could go on and on."

"If by a hick town those campaign organizers mean what 'hick town' usually does, if they mean a community which takes its time and minds its own business and is not always bawling for something or about something and that's a good place to live and do business, where the people don't get all 'het up' day in and day out about new frills in style and the stock markets, then thank God, we live and will live in a 'hick town'. Let 'er Hick."

Pooling Railway Traffic

Claim Major Savings Expected For Railways In Britain

Pooling of all competitive traffic has accomplished major savings for the railways of Great Britain, C. E. R. Sherrington, secretary of the railway research service of the British railways, said in Toronto, in an address to the accounting division of the Association of American Railroads.

The amalgamation of traffic services had not eliminated competition and most of the great trade routes were still served by two systems, he said, adding that bus investments were the most remunerative branch of railway activity in Britain. In addition the railways owned large fleets of road freight vehicles.

Stockholm, Sweden, will replace all trolley cars with motor buses.

Earth Slowing Down

Astronomers Predict Lengthening Of Our Days As A Result

A day 17 times the length of our day was predicted by the Astronomer Royal in a lecture at Oxford recently. His subject was "The Earth as a Clock," and he described the installation at Greenwich of a new quartz clock which it was hoped would be a better timekeeper than the earth.

He spoke of how investigations in partly enclosed seas established that tidal friction in such seas would cause quantitatively for the observed slowing down of the earth's rotation. The length of the day would continue to increase until it was equal to about 47 of our present days, when the earth would always turn the same face to the moon just as the moon now always turns the same face towards the earth.—Banfishire Journal.

Turn About Was Fair

Jack Osterman, actor, who died recently, once was signed to entertain at a firemen's ball in Schenectady. The fire chief wanted him to attend, to see how good Jackie was. When Osterman walked out the fire chief asked: "Where are you going?" "To start a fire," he explained. "I want to see how good you are."

Population Of The Reich

Is Now 79,600,000, Not Including Bohemia And Moravia
The German Government announced that its recent census showed the population of Germany to be 79,600,000, not including Memel and the protectorate of Bohemia-Moravia. The census counted 33,800,000 males and 45,800,000 females.

A census of Memel and is to be taken soon and it is expected to raise the population to 79,800,000. The official German news agency, DNB, said the addition of 1,800,000 inhabitants of Bohemia and Moravia, taken over after the breakup of Czechoslovakia, gave greater Germany a population of about 86,600,000.

"Of European States only Belgium, The Netherlands, England and Italy show a higher density of population," DNB said. "According to these population figures the Reich is the most populous nation of Europe after Soviet Russia."

(The population of the Soviet Union, according to an official estimate in 1934, was 183,000,000.)

The announcement said population density had increased from 339.2 inhabitants per square mile in 1933 to 352.3 and that the population of the old Reich excluding the Saar, Austria, Sudetenland, Bohemia, Moravia and Memel had had increased about 3,200,000 or more than four per cent, since 1933.

Dentists On Wheels

Cars Operated In England To Look After School Children

British teeth are said to be the worst in the world. Prosperity, it is found, is the enemy of good teeth. The richer the people the softer the food they eat, and soft food is a tooth's chief foe. Hard bread and food that makes man bite exercise his jaws, keep his gums in good condition, and so preserves his teeth.

To protect British children from the evil results of too much soft food, surgeries on wheels have been adopted by the school dentists in Sussex, Essex, Hampshire, Norfolk, Nottingham, and Northumberland.

There are 26 of these dental cars operating. In Norfolk, the pioneer country, 9,000 children need treatment last year. The dental trailer costs about £250 and can be drawn by a 14 h.p. car. "It is roomy enough to hold the dentist, his assistant, the young patient and a parent or other guard. Electricity can be drawn from the school mains.—London Tit-Bits.

Farming In Germany

Flight Of Agricultural Workers From Land Has Become Acute

The flight of agricultural workers from the land has become so acute a problem in Germany that the Government has been forced to take measures to forbid agricultural workers to change their profession. This freedom of the agricultural workers with regard to change of residence has been severely limited, and it has even been laid down that a member of a peasant farming family owing a farm may only work on other farms after obtaining official permission. It is estimated that since 1935 German agriculture has lost no less than 650,000 labourers through flight from the land. This loss of labour has especially affected the small farmers. Entrepreneurs who have 20 hectares of land, that is the majority of the small and middling farmers, have lost 38 per cent. of their workers over the age of 18 years.

Greater South Africa

Plans For Transfer Of Territories Which Would Double Present Area
The South African government is considering scheme for transfer of territories which would double the area of the country.

Negotiations are proceeding between the British Dominions office and the Union's department of external affairs for transfer of three protectorates, Bechuanaland, Basutoland and Swaziland, at present governed by British commissioners.

The three territories which lie on the borders of the union have a total population of 1,000,000, of which 98 per cent. is black.

Perpetual Motion

Eighty-year-old W. E. Hill, Hughesville, Pa., announced recently that after four years of study he had solved the problem of perpetual motion and is completing a working model of his machine to prove his statement. Explaining that "the impossible" has been made possible by the help of God," Hill said he expected to seek a patent for his invention.

Nearly the entire life of the cicada, or common locust, is spent underground.

A Moist Welcome

A few weeks ago a company of soldiers was transferred from the East to sunny California—arriving in the midst of the rainy season.

The commander of the company, making a night tour of the camp, was challenged by a sentry who had been standing at his post for two hours in a driving rain.

"Who's there?" called the sentry.

"Friends," replied the C.O.

"Welcome to our mist," said the sentry.

Recall Stirring Days

Romantic Life On The Prairies With Coming Of Early Settlers

The scent of old prairie camp fires and almost forgotten tales creep into the convention hall of the Saskatchewan branch of the Canadian Postmasters' Association at Moose Jaw, when W. H. Stephen, Viceroy, newly elected vice-president, told delegates the story of a famous man of the west, Jean Louis Legare, postmaster at Willowbunch until his death in 1917.

Mr. Stephen told the story as related to him by his father, many years ago. It dealt with the stirring days of the white man's first early encroachment of the Blackfoot country. He connected it with the post office through Jean Louis Legare, a man the Saskatchewan postmasters two governments as a "man among men."

It was Legare, a Quebec-born Frenchman, who arrived at Wood Mountain in the '60's of the past century through Jean Louis Legare, a man the Saskatchewan postmasters two governments as a "man among men."

Many wonderful experiences were his during his romantic life on the prairie but it was following the massacre of General Custer's men at Little Big Horn by the victorious Sioux he came into recognition by two governments as a "man among men."

When all offers of the United States governments failed to induce Sitting Bull and his followers to return south of the boundary, when Canadian Indians were growing restless at the invasion of the Sioux on their hunting grounds, it was to Legare both governments appealed for assistance.

He was the only white man Sitting Bull would trust to investigate Washington's offer of amnesty. Legare journeyed to Washington and returned with the American terms, Sitting Bull accepted and peace was restored.

When reward was offered for his services Legare thought only of his beloved wife and he requested the American government to place a fire-guard from the east and west ends of Willow Bunch lake to join the fire-guard on the American side of the boundary.

The fire-guard was plowed and for years after it remained the symbol of the treaty of Sitting Bull and Legare.

Later, the United States government gave Legare $5,000 to offset some $8,000 he had spent in caring for American Indians while they were in Canada. He died in 1917—years after the passing of the old west—when he was postmaster of Willow Bunch.

His stories are still recalled by two men, both of whom knew him well. They are Frank Bellefleur, present postmaster of Willow Bunch, and W. J. Motherwell, now director of postal service, Moose Jaw.

Work By Lantern Light

Scheme To Halt Activities Of Beaver Not A Success

The roadmaster on the Bruce subdivision, Canadian National Railways, recently had "beaver trouble". These busy animals were partially blocking drainage at a culvert. An employee suggested hanging a lantern at the culvert at night to frighten the animals away. The roadmaster thought it was a good idea. Next morning he inspected the culvert, finding the beavers had apparently put on a night shift, for they had done twice as much work as usual. The lantern plan was abandoned.

CHAPTER XV.—Continued

He made no amenities of greeting. "I have come for Sarah Lynn," he said simply. "Twelve days I have been coming to her; I can no longer wait." He made a slight gesture toward the governess who had delayed him. "I will take her with me. Or—if the doctors do not allow—I stay beside her until she can go." The small sentences came out roughly, hammered into crude shape on an anvil of strong feeling. "It should not have gone, she turned from me, she sent me away, but it was the pain, the drug. Now I know, I flew away, but—" he groped for words—"but I did not leave her; always she was with me, land, sea, air, in my work, eating, sleeping. To forget my work, that—" It is finished," I said, but it was not finished. So, now, I come again. If she says, 'Never fly,' then I do not fly. I take her or I stay beside her." He stopped talking and turned toward the door. "Now I go to her."

Conrad Jordan was on his feet. "Stop, Gunnar! Wait! You don't understand—"

The tall youth nodded. "I understand. She will shrink from me still?" His face worked. "At first maybe. No matter. I go to her."

The older friend said desperately, "Gunnar, I must tell you—"

He gave a muffled cry. "She lives?"

"Yes, but she—" he laid a hand on Gunnar's arm but he shook it off, striding toward the door.

It was Mary Dana Webster who blocked his way.

"Gunnar—wait! I've got to tell you—you've got to take it. Sarah Lynn is well again. She's been walking for weeks now, and she won't even be lame. But—" she cut through his shout of joy—"Gunnar, listen to me!"

MILLIONS of women have depended upon this Compound and have passed the word along to friends and neighbors, and to their children.

Why not take Flekman's Compound and "sneezing thru"?

me! She's going to marry Duncan Van Doren next week."

Jim Jung, the cat-footed Chinese second-boy, came padding up the stairs to tell Mrs. Dana that a lady was calling, and she went down to find Ardine standing in the hall. The serene sunniness of her face clouded over a trifle. Ardine had never come to see Sarah Lynn in all her long imprisonment, although expensive flowers had arrived at the hospital with the card of Mr. and Mrs. Keaton Dana.

Ardine did not even return the thinly gracious greeting. "I thought you'd like to know," she said. "Gunnar Thorwald is back." She was out of breath with hurrying, and her hot-looking hands with their crimson nails were trembling.

"Here?"

"Here. I saw him, just now, going into Lynn Dana's house."

Mrs. Dana drew herself up with the ancient gesture of a lady putting an upstart in her place. She was milk-white. "Thank you. I—I appreciate your thoughtfulness, not, of course, that it could make any difference now, but—"

Ardine lifted one full shoulder in a languid shrug. "All right. I just thought you'd like to know." She let herself out of the front door.

the days on his slender fingers. "And everything finished and ready now!" Mrs. Dana said with an odd laugh. "You could—you could be married tomorrow—or this evening!"

"That's an idea!" Duncan agreed fondly. "Why not?" Sarah Lynn said, "Your family won't be here until Monday." She waited for Duncan to move.

"Of course!" her mother said. "We couldn't disappoint them. But if you should want a romantic elopement—Everything's ready, even to the license!"

Duncan deliberated with his knight. "Not our line, is it, Sarah Lynn? Old and settled and sedate—" he moved the piece.

Sarah Lynn's hand hovered over the board, hesitated, came to rest on the table's edge. She spoke in a voice they had not heard for a long time. "Duncan, are you very sure? I mean, are you satisfied?"

"Of course I am," he said quickly. "You play!"

"I haven't tricked you, have I?" she went on. "You said you'd be content with half a loaf, but sometimes I think it's just a few crumbs, Duncan." She looked at him steadily.

Sally Ann would have seen a crack in the cellophane. "Are you sure?" He gave her hand a pat. "I'm sure you're going to beat me in a minute!"

After a pause Sarah Lynn made her move. "Check!" she said in her usual voice.

Her mother went to her own room and talked excitedly over the telephone to Aunt Helena. The family seeress was startled but she pulled her serenity over her head like a sweater. Dear Adelaide was to lie down at once without a pillow, with an ice towel over her eyes, and relax, drawing long rhythmic breaths. There was not the slightest cause for alarm. The intruder would hear from Lynn Dana of Sarah Lynn's impending marriage and he would go again.

CHAPTER XVI.

Mrs. Dana's rhythmic breathing was interrupted by three telephone calls. She rose swiftly at each bell before a servant could answer, and said the same things in turn to Mary Dana Webster, Sally Ann, and Lynn Dana.

"No, I will not call her," she stated firmly. "No, I will not give her that message. There is absolutely no point in telling her; it can make no possible difference now; in her plans. . . I tell you it would make no difference—it is simply that I do not wish to have her disturbed and distressed by the revival of painful memories. . . No. No."

She went downstairs to find Jim Jung, the cat-footed Chinese second-boy. "Gim Jung, telephone ring, every time, you call me. Company come, say, 'Miss Sarah Lynn,' never mind, you call me!"

"All right," he agreed, incurious almost eyes on her face. "I call."

"Maybe letter come, maybe telegram, Miss Sarah Lynn, never mind, you bring to me!"

"All right," he said again. "I bring."

Ed Dana and his sons came home to dinner and it was a merry meal. Once the door-bell rang and Gim Jung said mysteriously, "Miss Dana, you come!" and Mrs. Dana hurried to the reception-hall, her heart slipping in her breast, to find a high school youth in a soiled sweat-shirt asking for young Bill. He was embarrassed by the warmth of her greeting.

After their always formal coffee in the drawing-room the family separated, the older sons off to their own occasions, the youngest reluctantly to his books, the husband to a directors' meeting at the San Jose Chamber of Commerce, and the mother went upstairs with Duncan and Sarah Lynn.

Duncan read a solid biography aloud in his pleasantly modulated cultured voice and Sarah Lynn leaned back in her chair, her hands loosely clasped in her lap, her eyes half closed. The pretty room was quiet and wintry and softly lit; the canaries' cages were covered with gay chintz and the Persian kittens were asleep in their basket in endearing attitudes. Framed photographs of plump babies looked down from the walls in dewy innocence, and Mrs. Dana began to have a sense of safety, of sanctuary so complete that she started in on her rhythmic breathing again.

Then the door opened without a preliminary knock and Miss Pennington walked in. The harsh color had closed out of her hand round cheeks and her pale eyes appeared to protrude farther than ever. She stood still in the middle of the room.

"Sarah Lynn," she said abruptly. "Gunnar Thorwald is here."

Sarah Lynn gave a muffled cry, her clenched hands at her mouth.

"Hush, Miss Pennington!" her employer said sharply. "I forbid you to—"

The governess went steadily on. "Sarah Lynn, he has come back for you."

Duncan was on his feet. "Miss Pennington, this makes no difference to Sarah Lynn now!"

"Listen to me, Sarah Lynn! He came back, thinking you were still helpless, that you would never walk again. He came to take you away with him, or to stay with you forever."

"This means less than nothing to you, at this late date, darling," the mother said. "Remember, he went away at the moment when your condition seemed most hopeless."

"Because you turned from him in horror," Miss Pennington said quickly. "You know that you deliberately sent him away."

Sarah Lynn was out of her chair, wide-eyed, shaking. "Yes—because I knew how he despised weakness! Because I didn't want to spoil his life—because I want him to be free!"

Take Pride In Your Town

Trees, Lawns And Flowers Make A Town Beautiful

As you drive through the country in your car this summer, some time during the day you are going to exclaim, "What a beautiful town!" That town is the town in which you will want to stop for the night; that town is the one in which you would like to spend your vacation; that town is the kind of a town you would like to retire to when the retiring time of life comes.

If you are of an analytical turn of mind, you will realize that most of the things which make a town beautiful are growing things. They are lawns, gardens, flowers, trees, parks.

Fresh paint and attractive fences are added attractions, of course, but it is rarely indeed that you see a dilapidated, unpainted house in the same yard with a beautiful garden, or an unpainted, ramshackle fence around a well-kept lawn.

It is also true that this beauty rarely just happens. Some one has made the town beauty conscious, tree conscious, flower conscious, lawn conscious. In many cases investigation will show that these beautiful towns have thriving garden clubs, and the garden clubs have been moving factor in all this creation of beauty—Kiwans Magazine.

Not Deadly To Humans

The bite of a tarantula, or banana spider, is not deadly to humans as is generally supposed. The spider uses its mild poison to paralyze small animals upon which it preys for food. It bites the prey and then retreats to wait until the poison has done its work. When the prey is helpless, the spider returns to suck the blood and eat.

Wanted To Join Navy

But Man Who Became Oil Magnate Had To Help Family

Sir Henri Deterding, the oil magnate and one of the richest men in Europe, who died recently, might have become an Admiral. If he had had any money in his youth, he once said, he would have gone to sea, but as he had to earn his own living and help his people he had to look for something more immediately remunerative. He became the complete business man. He knew every detail of office work. Often he typed his own letters. This information was gathered from his personal assistant, Prince M. Soumaboff, a Russian prince, who met Sir Henry soon after the war and was invited to join his staff about six years ago. Prince Soumaboff states that Sir Henry was an astounding man at figures. He could read a balance sheet and grasp its essentials at a glance, while his men would need hours to study it. He often surprised his staff by counting in his head large sums which they needed ten minutes and pencil and paper. He often said that his success was the fact that he left great responsibilities to others. His secret longing was to be a farmer. He bought large tracts of land in several countries and settled his children on them. He spent each week-end on one of his estates, and helped in tilling the soil.

An Ideal Workshop

Soviet Scientists Using Nature's Refrigeration In Arctic For Experiments

Tass, official Russian news agency, reported living organisms dating back 20,000 years have been revived by Soviet scientists after a long sleep in frozen soil.

Spores of water plants and fungi and also soil bacteria were found in the frozen soil strata of Eastern Siberia near the bones of extinct mammoth bones.

Soviet scientists, using nature's refrigerator in the Arctic for their experiments, have been seeking to locate the boundary between life and death for many years.

Back in September, 1936, they were successful in reviving plant organisms calculated to have been frozen solid from 1,000 to 3,000 years in the land of perpetual ice.

The all-union academy of sciences then undertook experiments to revive "dead" organisms of even greater antiquity.

The region north of the arctic circle provides an ideal workshop since the scientists need dig down but a few yards to strike the zone of perpetual ice which is from 165 to 200 feet thick.

In this frozen belt, nature has stored for centuries both plant and animal organisms which may be dead or in a state of suspension.

Has Dual Personality

Doctor Thinks T.B. Germ May Aid Blood Clotting In Surgery

The germ of tuberculosis was described as a "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" of the medical world—a killer in one role, a life-saver in another.

Dr. William Charles White, chairman of the medical research committee of the National Tuberculosis Association, told scientists convening for a four-day convention that from the germ science has obtained a form of Vitamin K, the anti-hemorrhagic vitamin which prevents or checks fatal bleeding in obstructive jaundice.

The tiny lethal bacilli, he said, are the source of a substance known as phtholcol, already used effectively to give jaundice sufferers the necessary blood-clotting they need, and he added:

"There is a possibility that it also may be used to prevent bleeding in surgery."

"It is surprising that good may come from tuberculosis by the discovery that the yellow crystals which give the tuberculosis germ its color are a form of vitamin K. It is thought that this discovery completes the vitamin K problem, and that phtholcol is probably the simplest member of an homologous series of anti-hemorrhagic substances."

From Western Ranges

Western Canada Wool Wins Out In A Severe Test

Recently a large manufacturer of automobiles in Canada reported that his firm had decided to use fabric made from all Canadian wool for the upholstery in their 1940 cars.

Before a fabric was decided on several were subjected to a rigid test, known as the "rubbing test". A mechanical device was used to rub the cloth just as if it were being worn by a person getting in and out of a car. To be satisfactory, a fabric must stand from 10,000 to 12,000 rubs. Two of the fabrics under test gave out before the required number of rubs had been reached. A third just passed. But a cloth made from 100 per cent. Virgin Canadian fleece from Western range sheep was still good after 50,000 to 60,000 rubs.

Excuse Was Reasonable

Author's Young Son Explained What Looked Like An Indiscretion

When King Edward VIII. visited the Isle of Man he was escorted through parts of the Island by Hall Caine the author. When His Majesty was about to depart on the royal yacht, it was proposed that a photograph be taken of the royal party and its island hosts. The family of the author was, of course, included, and when the prints were shown, it was found that Hall Caine's young son had committed the indiscretion of keeping his hat on in the presence of the King.

Manx society was much shocked at this, and Mrs. Caine chided the lad; but he stoutly maintained his action, saying: "But, Mamma, I watched the King—and he kept his hat on, so I did too!"

In Edmonton

EDMONTON, July — Following closely the announced formation of the Alberta Safety League whose objective is to reduce high way and civic traffic accidents, an Order in Council enacted Monday last establishes a maximum speed limit of 25 miles an hour for all vehicles moving over roads and highways under repair.

Some workmen have been injured by careless drivers a government official stated. "We have had barriers knocked down and road signs disregarded." In Edmonton, some days ago, two street railway workers were knocked down and seriously injured by an automobile. Violators of the new order will be dealt with under The Highway Traffic Act.

Condemnation of the recently passed federal mortgage bank act by Premier Aberhart in the first two of four statements which he stated he will issue resulted in the Deputy Governor of the Bank of Canada seeking an interview with the Alberta Premier. Publication of the remaining statements has not been postponed as at first understood. Premier Aberhart declared the new legislation was "attractive bait to lure the unfortunate overburdened farmers and home-owners into the trap of increased financial control without leaving them any protection."

In government circles it is claimed that the wording of the bill is such as to convey only a superficial interpretation of its contents to the lay mind; only legal training could lay bare the implications.

The Premier was to start his annual speaking tour on Monday 10. Pending the results of his discussions with the Deputy Governor, it is unlikely that the two remaining statements will be withheld.

With the opening of the Central Purchasing Agency, a new phase of internal economy in government was inaugurated in Canada. Alberta's agency, which is composed of A. Shulka, Kings Printer and George Clah, Marketing Board chairman with a third member representing each specific department, is the only one of its kind in Canadian provincial or Dominion government.

In the short period during which the Agency has operated, savings of nearly $8,000 have been registered. Alberta-made goods are given preference by the Purchasing Agency, and all supplies for direct relief purposes are purchased in the Province. The Board calls for tenders publicly, and following the allocation of the order, any bidder is privileged to examine all other bids on file.

Organization of the purchasing agency followed a long period of close study of civic and state purchasing methods in states south of the border where such exists. Alberta's agency is organized with the best features of all as an essential basis. It is estimated that, on the basis of present savings registered, the year's total will approximate $750,000—which will go into the general revenue fund.

First steps toward the centralization of government purchases were taken in the King's Printer's department, where radical changes were made from 1935 on. It has been estimated that in the field of mailing requirements alone the savings in envelopes and letterheads is more than $8,000 annually.
